INTRODUCTION

Literacy is the ability to read, write, speak and listen effectively. These skills enable students to express themselves clearly, listen to others, gain knowledge and build an understanding of the world around them.

New York City Public Schools (NYCPS) is dedicated to ensuring all students build their literacy skills and become strong readers. Especially during the summer months, families play a vital role in supporting their child's continued literacy development at home.

Why is Summer Reading Important?

- Reading daily is very important for all children to strengthen their vocabulary, fluency, reading comprehension and build their background knowledge. Summer reading also helps students cultivate a love for reading.
- Research shows that up to two months of reading skills can be lost over the summer when students do not engage in educational activities. This is often referred to as the 'summer slide'. When returning to school, these students fall further behind their peers.
- It is recommended that students read every day since they are not getting the same daily access to text as they would when school is open.
- Spending two to three hours per week reading and practicing literacy skills during the summer can help students avoid the summer slide and increase academic achievement.

HOW TO USE THIS GUIDE

Families

- Review this guide's resources to support your child in building their literacy skills
 - Tips for Families to Support Reading at Home
 - Recommended Titles by Grade Bands
 - Resources for Finding Books and Texts
 - Additional Resources to Support Literacy Development
- Set a summer reading goal with your child and your child's school. Sample goals can include:
 - Number of books read
 - Number of pages read
 - Time spent reading
 - Exploring new genres and new authors

A note to families: Book titles and websites in this guide have been suggested by librarians and educational organizations. Be an active part of your child's book selection. Also, please check with your child's school if there are additional lists for recommended or required books.

Schools

- Share this guide with families
 - Provide printed copies and send home along with important end-of-year notices and/or report cards
 - Email the guidebook to families with a personal note regarding the school's commitment to summer reading
 - Upload the guidebook to your school's website so families can easily access online
 - Link the guidebook to your school's social media accounts
 - Share with your Family Coordinator who can further support families with summer reading
- Check in with students and families over the summer about their reading goals via telephone, email or remote conferences.
- Engage in online conversations about summer reading through a shared platform; provide a platform for students to discuss summer reading with peers.
- If possible, allow students and their families to enter your school library to check-in/out books on a regular basis.

TIPS FOR FAMILIES & GUARDIANS

Model Positive Reading Habits

- Let your children see you read for pleasure.
- Share your excitement for reading with your kids. Talk about what you are reading and why you are reading it.
- Schedule time into your daily/weekly schedule for the whole family to sit down and read.
- Take a trip to the local bookstore, or an online bookstore, and shop for books as a family.
- Visit the library as a family; help each other select books to read.
- Attend readings by favorite authors at local bookstores and libraries. If possible, purchase the book(s) and let your child get the author's signature or borrow the book from the library.
- Encourage older children to read to younger children (siblings, cousins, neighbors, pets and even stuffed animals make great audience members).
- Include reading beyond books; have newspapers and magazines available as well.

Talk About Books

- At dinner, or other informal times, ask your children about the book they are reading.
- Use reading questions to have deeper conversations about books.
- Share your childhood memories about reading and books. Talk about your own favorite kids' books and authors, your struggles/successes with reading, etc.
- Use the Supporting Reading at Home Resource to support your child with a culturally and linguistically responsive approach.

Provide Books Aligned to Your Child's Interests

- Notice what your child is most interested in reading and provide them with more reading materials on that topic/genre.
- Ask a teacher or librarian for book suggestions —they usually know the new and popular reading material for children of different ages.
- Utilize Teachingbooks.net to watch book trailers, interviews with authors, and gauge your child's interest in a particular book.

Tips and Book Recommendations

The subsequent pages provide tips and book recommendations for specific age groups:

TIPS FOR K-2

Read Aloud to Each Other

- Read your child's favorite stories aloud.
- Let your child read aloud to you. Reading the same book multiple times is natural and beneficial for new readers. You might also want to try reading a page to your child and then ask your child to read the same page back to you. Keep it fun or make it into a game.
- Practice the names of letters and the sounds the letters make. "Do you see the letter 'b' on the page? What sound does that letter make?"
- Practice the sounds in words with your child. Young children often do not hear all the sounds that make up words. Use rhyming words: cat-> hat -> mat -> bat. Sound words out with your child: "Where's your book? B-b-b--oooo-k."

Create a Reading Environment in Your Home

- Set up a comfortable space in your home for reading, free from distractions like TV/computer/games/phones. Placing pillows or cushions on the floor is an easy way to make any space into a reading space.
- Have reading materials such as books, magazines, newspapers, etc. throughout your home and easily accessible to your children.
- Always bring a book to read on public transportation and when you anticipate having to wait in a line.
- Create a special place for your children to keep their books in the home. For example, a specific section of a bookshelf, a box in their room or in a designated place at home, etc.

TIPS FOR GRADES 3-5

Read Aloud to Each Other

- Read your child’s favorite stories aloud.
- Let your child read aloud to you. If their reading sounds choppy, practice the page(s) several times. Alternatively, you read the page first, and then ask your child to read the same page back to you. Keep it fun or make it into a game.
- Find materials to read aloud wherever you go: menus, advertisements, brochures, street and store signs, bus and subway maps, catalogs that come in the mail, free newspapers, etc.

Create a Reading Environment in Your Home

- Set up a comfortable space in your home for reading, free from distractions like TV/ computer/games/phones. Placing pillows or cushions on the floor is an easy way to make any space into a reading space.
- Have reading materials such as books, magazines, newspapers, etc. throughout your home and easily accessible to your children.
- Subscribe to a children’s magazine and have the magazine sent directly to your child. Show interest when it arrives: for example, “Show me your favorite article,” “I love that picture of the sea lions.” Some popular magazines include Highlights, Ranger Rick, Sports Illustrated for Kids and National Geographic Junior.
- Use reading as a vehicle for learning. For example, if your child is interested in flying a kite, read an article on making a kite at home.
- Ask relatives and friends who do not live near you to send letters or emails to your child.
- Always bring a book to read on public transportation and when you anticipate having to wait in a line.
- Create a special place for your children to keep their books in the home. For example, a specific section of a bookshelf, a box in their room, etc.

TIPS FOR GRADES 6-8

Read Aloud to Each Other

- Ask your child to read a book aloud to you. If they seem resistant, ask them to read a smaller section such as a paragraph or page from their book.
- Read aloud interesting articles from newspapers, magazines, or online sites. “Listen to this, the mayor thinks we should...”
- Incorporate these read-alouds into your daily/weekly routines: while doing the dishes, making food, etc.
- Read aloud an instruction manual, or ask your child to read it aloud to you, as you put together a new item in your home.

Help Adolescents Balance Reading with their Active Social Lives

- Set aside a span of time every night that is just for reading (turn the phone and TV off).
- Make a schedule with your child to help plan out reading (for example, the bus ride on the way to karate lessons is a great time for reading).
- Buy several copies of a book and encourage your child to invite their best friend to read it together.

Create a Reading Environment in Your Home

- Set up a comfortable space in your home for reading, free from distractions like TV/computer/games/phones. Placing pillows or cushions on the floor is an easy way to make any space into a reading space.
- Have reading materials such as books, magazines, newspapers, etc. throughout your home and easily accessible to your children.
- Use reading as a vehicle for learning. Research and read about topics that come up naturally in conversation.
- Ask relatives and friends who do not live near you to send letters or emails to your child.
- Remind your child to bring a book when they go on public transportation and when they anticipate having to wait in a line.
- Buy bookmarks as souvenirs if traveling (they are inexpensive and promote reading) and/or pick up free ones offered at most bookstores.

TIPS FOR GRADES 9-12

Help High School Students Balance Reading with their Active Social Lives

- Encourage teens to use various social media tools such as GoodReads where they can connect with people who like the same books as they do, and share their opinions about the books they are reading.
- Keep your discussions about reading positive; do not pressure your kids or criticize the books they like.
- Read some popular young adult books and discuss them with your teen; this can be a wonderful way to talk about sensitive subjects.
- Encourage your teen to become an expert in a subject they particularly enjoy by reading widely and deeply about that topic.
- Do not abandon reading aloud just because your teens are capable of reading for themselves; reading aloud is something you can mutually enjoy and it can be a great bonding experience.
- Remind teens that used bookstores are great places to hunt for quirky, bargain books.
- Suggest that your teen leave online reviews about the books they have read, to help other readers decide whether or not those books might be right for them. They can leave reviews on Amazon, or start a “vlogging” book review series on YouTube.
- Encourage your child to listen to audio books. While it is not “reading,” it is a great way to get teens “hooked” on different literature and authors.
- Help teens find social events like poetry slams or teen book clubs at a local branch library, bookstore, or art space.
- Encourage your child to use various online tools such as Animoto to create their own book trailers.

READING COMPONENTS: PHONEMIC AWARENESS & PHONICS

In addition to reading texts, you can help your child develop language; map sounds to letters; blend sounds to read word parts and words; learn new words; write words; and read for understanding. These skills are essential for developing into a strong reader. In this section, families can find resources and activities to support each of the reading components.

Phonemic Awareness

Phonemic Awareness - the ability to speak, hear, identify, and manipulate the 40–44 spoken phonemes (smallest units of sound, often known as the building blocks of speech) that make up the English language.

RESOURCES & ACTIVITIES

Activities for the Preschool or Elementary Classroom | Reading Rockets

Sound/Spelling Boxes | Classroom Strategies | Reading Rockets

Explains and demonstrates how to use sound boxes (with/without print) to support children to segment words into sounds.

Phonics

Phonics - the ability to know how letters represent sounds, how to decode words and how to remember their spellings.

RESOURCES & ACTIVITIES

Games to Breakdown and Put Words Together | Classroom Strategies | Reading Rockets

Provides activities and demonstrations to support children to use the knowledge of blending sounds and segmenting words when reading and spelling.

General Phonics Practice Activities

Provides flashcards, games and other activities to reinforce phonics skills.

For Students at a K-2 Reading Level

READING COMPONENTS: FLUENCY, VOCABULARY, & COMPREHENSION

Fluency

The ability to read words automatically without errors in text. A fluent reader groups words together to form meaningful phrases and sentences and reads with expression to reflect and enhance the meaning of a text. Fluency is critically important and is a bridge between decoding words and comprehension.

RESOURCES & ACTIVITIES

Fluency Matters | Reading Rockets
